Of all the queer mines from which precious stones have come, the oddest is that which yielded his $13,000 diamond to Dr. Gimp's boy, Joke, writes the Hoxawottamie Herald. He was wild enough ten years ago, and when he ran away to sea nobody expected to be surprised after that at any thing that happened. He sanded without a pound in his pocket at Cape Colony, and was soon on his way to the great South African diamond mines. There he worked for thirteen months, and when he reached the coast on his return home he was as for thirteen months, and when he reached the coast on his return home he was as black as a negro. He had, indeed, hired out m the diamond fields and blacked his face with palm oil so as to be on better terms with his fellow diggers. He had an enormous molar which had given him trouble from his infancy. Finally it had been plugged with a chunkot avory. The bottom of this plug he sawed off in the mines, stuck the big diamond into the cavity, clapped the plug back, passed the inspectors and reached home with it safely. It has long been known that in some specimens of bam reached home with it safely. It has long been known that in some specimens of bamboo a round stone is found at the joints of the cane. This is called "tabasheer," and is supposed to be deposited from the silicious juice of the cane. Another curiosity of the sort is the "cocoa-nut stone," found in the endo-sperm of the cocoanut in Java and other East India islands. It is, according to Dr. Kimmins, a pure carbonate of lime, and and the shape of the stone is sometimes round, sometimes spear-shaped, while the appearance is that of a white pearl without much luster. Some of the stones are as large as cherries and as hard as foliapar or opal. They are very rarely found, and are large as cherries and as hard as feldspar or opal. They are very rarely found, and are regarded as precious stokes by the Orientals, and charms against disease or evil spirits by the natives. Stones of that kind are also found in the pomegranate and other East India fruits. Apatite has also been discovered in the midst of teak wood.

Mr. Dantree found that it a speck of gold were placed in a solution of the chloride, the gold would grow into a small grain on any piece of wood or cork introduced into the liquid. In other words, the metal con-tained in the chloride would come out from its combination as native gold and unite with the tiny speck of pure metal which served it as a nucleus. It is not improbable that the gold in quartz got similarly de-posited round a common center, so that in the most literal sense it may perhaps be true in spite of Aristotle's dogmatic statement to the contrary) that money grows, though very slowly. It is a pleasant thought, indeed, for the poor man to know that gold is even now still growing. Brough Smith has shown that it can be deposited nowadays in somewhat appreciable quantities within comparatively short periods. Bits of mineralized timber and beams from the galleries of the older workings in Australian mines have been found to exhibit, under the microscope, particles of gold, intermixed with crystals of iron pyirtes, all through the central parts of the wood, and this gold must, of course, have gathered there from solution in water dur-ing the few years that have elapsed since the first discovery of the precious metal in Australia. Mr. Uhrich similary notes that in the gold drifts anriferous pyrites are often found incrusting or replacing roots. often found incrusting or replacing roots and twigs, and samples of such gold-bearing wood, when submitted to an assay, have yielded amounts of pure metal varying ounces per ton. H. A. Thompson further mentions a specimen of pyrites which had gathered in the center of an old tree trunk, and which yielded at the rate of as much as

BEACHING A BOAT.

Vivid Description of a Most Difficult and Hazardous Undertaking.
Lieutenant George Gray in his "Australia's Heroes," gives a vivid description of the process of beaching a boat, from which we make the following extract:

Once more, then, was the scene repeated of dancing in a boat, with maddening speed upon furious rollers, until these break, and the boat is borne in, followed by a mass of foam far higher than the stern, which ap-pears eagerly to pursue for the purpose of engulfling it. There is no scene in nature more exciting, or which in a greater degree calls forth one's energy than the beaching of a boat in a dangerous surf.

Never did I, on such occasions, take the steer oar for the purpose of running the boat in, but many contending feelings rushed through my mind; and after a few minutes I settled down into the calm which springs from the conviction that the general safety in coming dangers depends altogether upon the coolness and resolution with which they are met, and never more so than in beaching a boat; when once you are among the foaming waters in you must go; to retreat is impossible, and nothing is left but that each one silently and steadily do his duty, regardless of the din and strife of rag-duty, regardless of the din and strife of raging waves around.

The only plan to sdept is for all to give way strongly and steadily, let what will take place, whilst the boat-steerer keeps her head straight for the beach. A huge roller breaks right into the boat and almost swamps it, a man is knocked over and loses his oar; heed not these things; let each man mind his own oar and naught else, and give way, give way strongly, until the boat grounds, then in a moment each quita his oar and springs into the water, and ere the waves has retired the boat is partially run up; another wave succeeds, and the run up; another wave succeeds, and the operation of running up is repeated until she is high and dry. The danger is over, and we can now dry our drenched clothing, get our breath and take a needed rest on the breach beyond the reach of the raging breakers.

Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism, but it can be done, if the proper reatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert of New Brunswick, Ills.: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right today; and I would urge on everyone who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once." For several years, when anything like a run of fever, or other ailments that could be superinduced, theoretically or practically, from a lack of a system of sewerage, there was a hue and cry demanding action in that direction. So legislation was secured to partially tary. effect that end two years ago, and the indebtedness incurred amounting to nearly twenty thousand dollars was provided for by the authority given to issue the bonds of the town, by the last Legis-

The thickly inhabited portion of the town has an excellent general system of sewerage, but the citizens, or too many of them, apparzens, or too many of them, appar-ently fail to appreciate their duty.

This is true of some who have school and in time became an invetersuffered from diseases directly attributable to the want of availing themselves of the means of protecting themselves against the cause that has created suffering, anxiety and burdens attending sickness. The thing to do is that sickness. The thing to do is that suggested by "Common Sense," in another column of this issue, that is, for those in authority to force one and all to connect their premises with the sewers in a way to carry off all offensive matter through them. This can only be done by the proper authorities passing an ordinance, a clean cut ordinance, requiring the work to be done, and making it the duty of some official, over whom they have control, in cases of neglect, to see that the work is done. This course will be approved by all who are far seeing enough to know the good results to be realized, and this fact, if there were none other, should insure prompt action in this matter, which is so important.

THE Harrisburg Call says: "If George Washington should by any means accidentally learn of some of the aristocratic things they intend to de at his centennial over in New York, he would likely apness." The Call is off all wrong on old George. He was the father of aristocracy in the United States. Alexander Hamilton was his right thand in war and in the Government after the war, and after all the years he ventured to slap old George familiarly on the back. when he received a look which made him say: "I will never try that exploit flume from the Lake to the Carson again." He never held a reception river. It crosses the road about half or Cabinet meeting that he was not dressed in full military uniform, sword and all, as, in his judgement, became the Commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States. The Salt Lake Tribune says: Could his ghost return to the coming centennisl celebration, the chances are that those who might watch it would detect a sneer on the august face, at the amateur attempts of degenerate New Yorkers to ape the old aristocratic methods. He had in his soul a vast love for the people, and planned earnestly for their welfare. At the same time he had a mind that ran altogether to the theory that some men are better than others, that titles were to be greatly revered, and he never once lowered his stately crest.

On April 10th we published an editorial note to the effect that Judge Wells had not resigned from the Board of Regents, and would not do so until after the Supreme Court had passed upon the constitutionality of the law under which he was appointed to the Board. It now transpires that we were in error, for it seems that the Judge had resigned as a Regent. The article was published without any thought of casting any reflection upon either Judge Wells or Governor Stevenson, but, on the contrary, we thought we were doing them a kindness, because a great many papers were casting reflections upon the Governor by saying that it took him a good while to make the appointment, and other similar items. We got our information from a reliable source, and believed it to be true. Now comes Judge Wells with a threatened libel suit. There is no libel in it. A man so ignorant of the law should not be permitted to occupy a seat on the bench a single day. Crack your whip, Judge, we are oaded for you.

THE action of the managers of the Blood Horse Association in ruling the rider and trainer of Al. Farrow, the great race horse, from the track for the job they were in at Saturday's race at the Bay District track, at San Francisco, was a just rebuke, only they did not carry it far enough. They shouldhave ruled off the horse and his owner for life. That would learn jobbers on race tracks that they could not carry on their nefarious practices to the injury of innocent people. Al. Farrow will be remembered as the horse that ran Prince Ferdinand the Heir to here last Fall, and was not "out to win." Many who bet their good money on him know to their sorrow that he was "pulled" here, and should have been punished. If race track managers would be severe in their treatment of those engaged in jobbing horse races a great was the interest taken that few times the effect would be salu-

Claus Spreckles on the Sugar Supply and Trusts.

Not Afraid of Sugar Trusts. Chicago, April 25 .- Claus Spreckels of San Francisco arrived yesterday on his way to Philadelpnia. "I am going," he said, "to start my new refinery, which will be about June 1st. It has cost me $3,000,000, and is beyond question the largest in the world It was a move I had to make, and since I made it, I am afraid of no man, company or association in the refining business." Mr. Spreckels spoke of his beet sugar enterprise on the coast, and said the company had just paid a 5 per cent. dividend. He was asked:

"What is the future of the sugar beet "What is the future of the sugar beet in America?" "My own idea is that in a few years we will import no sugar. Not only does the beet grow to perfection in California, but it can be easily grown here in the cen-tral States, and in Kansas particu-larly. On Saturday last the few re-maining shares of the 5,000,000 of stock of the company of which I own stock of the company, of which I own a majority, was subscribed in San Francisco, and a new company incor-porated, the facilities of which will be ample to supply America with beet sugar. After this first year's trial we shall go at the business on a large scale. Ten new factories at a cost of $500,000 each, on the same general plan of the one already in existence will be built in different parts of Cali-fornia. These will turn out only raw sugar. The product will be sold to the refiners. The Philadelphia resugar. The product will be sold to the refiners. The Philadelphia re-finery will not handle this sugar. A BUSY PLACE.

A Visit to the Candy Factory of H. Fisher & Co A GAZETTE reporter visited the candy factory of H. Fisher & Co., Sacramento, yesterday, and was surprised to see what a busy place it was. The firm employ about sixty hands now, mostly girls, and during the holiday season they employ from eighty to ninety. They buy their sugar in car-load lots, and manufacture their own load lots, and manufacture their own syrup. They make everything, from the tiniest caraway seed to the finest French candy, known to the trade. It is an interesting process to watch its progress from the time the sugar is melted until it is ready for packing, and makes one wonder where all the candy goes to. This firm ships tons to all parts of the Pacific coast States and Territories. The buying and manufacturing is all done by Herman Fisher, a bright young man, who is thoroughly posted in the various methods employed, and who keeps well up on the markets. Reno merchants deal largely with this house, and are always sure of getting value received for anything they send for.

All who attended the Reno Bicycle Club dance last night seemed to enjoy themselves very much. The company was composed of Reno's leading peo-ple. WHY THE DELAY?

A Sensible Talk by "Common

Summer is fast approaching, and as yet comparatively little has been done toward utilizing the system of sewer age for which the town is being taxed. and which was intended to protect the citizens against the ravages of disease which have prevailed each year to a trol town affairs. They have the authority to provide ways and means to make those who are regardless of health and life do that which will prohealth and life do that which will protect both, by carrying off the filth and waste through proper connections with the sewers. Where the much-dreaded typhoid fever prevailed last season was in the older part of the town, north of the track, where the mains run through the several streets and alleys, so that all can easily connect, but few have done so. As to the causes of typhoid fever, the germ theory is the one accepted by most medical authorities. These germs are borne by the wind, diffused by gases, and conveyed by water. One of the great sources of the creation of these disease-making germs is the accumulation of human and other filth in thickly settled localities, which can only be made to effectually disappear by efficient plumbing, successful drainage and good ventilation. If the town of Reno is to be scourged again with the deadly enemy to health and life the coming Summer and Fall, the blame will largely lay at the door of the County Commissioners, who are adding to the general system of sewerage, but leaving it merely optionary with the citizens to do their duty, when they should be forced to do so without delay by an imperative ordinance. An ordinance should be passed giving the Chief of Police plenary power, if property holders fail or refuse to utilize the sewers, to go on tect both, by carrying off the filth and nary power, if property holders fail or refuse to utilize the sewers, to go on and connect therewith and refuse to utilize the sewers, to go on and connect therewith and make the expense therefor a lien on the property on which the improvement is made. If the Commissioners fail to take action at their next meeting looking towards protecting the town, which is now in a horribly filthy condition, which is a forerunner to some fatal epidemic, there should be a called meeting, and ways and means devised eeting, and ways and means devised

A Fortunate Druggist.

Mr. Edwin W. Joy for many years and now a prosperous druggist on the corner of Stockton and Market streets in San Francisco, probably ned of rivaling in wealth the medi cine kings of the country. But various rum und to the effect that having been floating aro he has struck it big, an Examiner reporter was difficulty unraveled the following story:

His success seemed to be in the treatment of liver and kidney disorders, with these common complaints was marvelou He seemed almost infallible, and his quie modest methods and his well-kept secret was as much a mystery as himself. After his de parture about a year later Mr. Joy determined to fathom the secret, and copying all the pres-criptions he had filled for the erratic doctor criptions he had filled for the erratio doctor he began a systematic analysis. Ih his exam-ination he discovered running all through the prescriptions for liver and kidney troubles, vitiated blood and stomach disorders a couple of vegetable extracts indigenous to California, so simple and so well known under homely so simple and so well known under homely every day as mes to every school boy as to entirely dissipate the suspicion that they were the active principles involved. So certain, however was Mr. Joy that he had discovered the secret, that he embodied the new elements in a preparation of Sassaparilla to disguise the taste, and put it before his customers under the modest name of Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. Immediately the same marvelous stories came back of its astonishing effects, and the mystery was solved, and the talk it has created has already caused it to step into prominence, and ras solved, and the alternative and the another California industry leaps into

BEAUTY WELL ADORNED.

Trimming Dress Fabrics with All Sorts of Flowers.

The Application of Natural Blossoms Gowns, Scarfs, Palls and Drapery—

There is no branch of work in flowers more especially adapted to gentlewomer than that of the application of natural-blos soms to drapery, says the New York Sun It must be done by deft hands. Men accus to must be one by deri hands. Men accus-tomed to stemming flowers on wooden pegs and to wiring stems are too clumsy to use the needle and thread, and have not the taste or patience necessary to put flowers on to fabrics with neatness and elegant effeet, For this reason, the average florist hesitates to introduce the most charming of all fashions, the garnishing of robes with natural flowers. He is really incapable of accomplishing an elaborate decoration on fabrics with such dainty material.

It is a simple matter to trim a dress with It is a simple matter to trim a dress with natural flowers, and there is no ornamentation so exquisitely beautiful. All that is required is to know how, and then "many hands make light work," and do it quickly. All the things for gowns must be applied to pieces that should be fitted exactly by a dress-maker. Sometimes the trimmings should be cut out of soft or stiff net, sometimes out of silveness of silv should be cut out of soft or stiff net, some-times out of silesia, or perhaps of silk. When an entire train for a wedding gown is to be covered with flowers material must be selected that will hang with proper effect. This train, like all trimmings covered with natural flowers, must be applied at the last moment. Bretelles and panels for gowns should be made of net, to which the blossoms are easily attached. Fine sewing silk well waxed (the color of the stem to be held) is the strongest thread and shows the least. Where foliage, vines and greenery is to be applied to fabric it is usually put on as tracery or passementerie, and is sewed on to the material of dress or drapery.

on to the material of dress or drapery.

In these days, when young women are so clever in art needle-work, there are in most every family circle those who excel in tasteful handiwork. These are the ones to choose for garnishing whatever is to be beautified with natural flowers. The flow-ers should be prepared by snipping off the stems, so that all are uniform; every stems, so that all are uniform; every ragged petal should be removed, and the flowers laid in water in a position that will keep them fresh without soaking the petals. A few at a time must be laid out on a dry cloth, and the water should be removed from them with absorbing cotton before they are applied to any fabric. Each leaf, blossom, or spray sets better the fewer stitches that are made to tack it on.

There is no flower so handsome and so generally useful for garnishing robes as generally useful for garnishing robes as the lily of the valley, for with one or two stitches it can be sewed firmly on to fabric, and will fall with fringy effect. It looks like a shower of pearls on white satin. It like a shower of pearls on white satin. It makes an elegant girdle or sash and tassels to finish the ends. A train and back breadths to a gown of this flower is a rich addition to a wedding dress. For fringing the decollete bodice and finishing the armhole of a sleeveless waist it is perfect.

Next to this the Roman hyacinth is useful for trimming. Cape jasmine, or gardenias and camelias, are lasting blossoms to apply for holding drapery, and when there is a rosetting of flowers for trimming. One of the loveliest blossoms to apply to a wedding gown is the edelwels, the bride's flower of Switzerland, the language of which is puri-ty. It is sent to this country pressed, but Posters, &c the rich, fleshy faoric of its petals is brought out by steaming over hot water, when it will look almost as fascinating as Every Description of Book Work Done with Neatwhen freshly gathered. The starry white blossom trims satin or tulle beautifully.

Moss rosebuds and the little mignonette roses may be applied with thread and needle, but these are the only varieties of the Queen of flowers that can he sewed on in elaborate patterns so that they will last an evening. Large roses must be applied in clusters with safety pins. Crushed roses are a most suitable garniture for dowagers' silks; but for velvets a heavier flower, such as stephanatis, japonica, or gardenia is more approanatis, japonica or gardenia is more appropriate for trimming.

Weekly Examiner and Weekly Gazette

Foliage is frequently mere effective than flowers for embellishing fabrics. A tracery of asparagus plumosus above the hem of a flounce of tulle is a lovely ornamentation, and may be applied very easily. The mossy Seligmella tacked on white or rese colore Seligmella Lacked on white or rese colored silk is an exquisite garniture. Ivy leaves are always handsome; the small leaves of the Heidelberg ivy should be selected for this use. The dried foliage of the Imperial silver tree of the Cape of Good Hope makes an elegant ornamentation for a gray silk. Clusters of statice should be worn on the

It seems that it is especially fitting to It seems that it is especially fitting to have a funeral decoration accomplished at home and by the family. The "no flowers" addition to a death notice is one of the results of carelessly made designs and uncouth pieces of flowers which have been sent to the house of mourning. It is meet that the members of the family should arrange the flowers that surround their dead. A pail of flowers or foliage shaped gracefully over the casket is a simple and rich design. It can be made of roses or of rich design. It can be made of roses or of ivy leaves; the latter is most suitable for ivy leaves; the latter is most suitable for an aged person. A pall of very dark green cloth or of a heavy cashmere is covered with ivy leaves and sprays sewed on. Clean the leaves by polishing each one with soft tissue paper. This will make the foliage of India-rabber trees, camelias or ivies shine like satin. Apply the leaves so that they lie in one direction. A pall may be so draped over a casket that it is lifted in front and fastened with palm leaves (cycas revoluta), or a cluster of violets and lilies. For the casket of a young person a pall of pink the casket of a young person a pall of pink or red roses is a beautiful embellishment. A scarf of lilies or daisies is suitable for the

A DESPERATE CUTLAW.

His Pursuit and Capture by a Nervy, Cool-Headed Detective. Cool-Headed Detective.

A Canadian efficer at Calgary, N. W. T., tells a New York Post correspondent this story of an adventure with a desperate whisky-trader: "I have had some close calls with whisky-traders in my time, and still," he added, meditatively, "I never had to shoot one yet." After a moment's pause he continued: "One of the most desperate men I aver are stad for having the continued: pause he continued: "One of the most desperate men I ever arrested for having whisky in his possession was Blank. It was in the fall of 1856. He had a four in hand load of whisky, gin and brandy that he was running across, and he and his partner were both riding in the wagon, Blank having no saddle-horse. This cargo was all he possessed in the world, and he knew that if he was saught he could not pay a fine of $400, for this was his second offense, and, of course, his four horses, wagon and liquor course, his four horses, wagon and liquor would be confiscated. When I first caught sight of them they were about three miles off, and I at once rode towards them to see who they were. As soon as they saw that I was after them they whipped their horses up to a gallop, but my horse was fresh an a fast runner, and before they had gone far it was plain to see that I was gaining fast on them. As soon as Blank saw this he stopped, cut off the leaders, and mounting one of them, galleped off; but by this time I was within half a mile of the wagon.

"When I rode up alongside I saw at a glance that it contained whisky, and also that the man who remained with it was not its owner. I dismounted and made him my prisoner, telling him to remain there with the wagon until I returned. 'Look here, stranger,' said he, 'don't follow that man, he won't be taken alive. He is armed with a Winchester and a Colt's revolver, and to prove to you that he won't be taken alive, I'll tell you who it is. It's Blank.'

""That's the very man I want,' said I. I jumped on my horse and put the spurs to him and rode after Blank. I caught up to him about half a mile further on in a coulee, where he had dismounted and was trying to where he had dismounted and was trying to hide. I galloped up to him so fast, and pulled up so quiet, that, in stepping back to avoid my horse, he caught his heel on the ground and fell. Before he could regain his feet I had dismounted and covered him ms feet I had dismonated and covered him with my revolver. He sprang to his feet and tried to draw his. I laid my hand on his shoulder, teiling him that he was my prisoner, at the same time holding my re-volver close to his head. By this time he had his partey drawn, and, seeing this, I pressed the trigger until the hammer of my self-cocker was as far back as it could go without snapping. He told me to shoot and be cursed, and at the same time sprang forward, so that the barrel of my pistol caught him on the temple, tearing a deep gash back into his scalp about six inches long. This partly stunned him, but in two or three seconds he recovered.

"His revolver was a Colt's 45 single-action, and therefore it required to be occled before it could be fired. By this time it was drawn, and he attempted to cock it. I caught hold of the hand in which he held it and turned it to one side, and at the same time told him that I would count ten, and if he did not drop his pistol when the number was counted I would blow out his number was counted I would blow out his brains. He called out: 'Blow away.' I counted up to nine, and pressed the trigger so that the hammer rose, and on seeing this he dropped his weapon and gave himself up. I got him mounted on his borse and brought him back to the wagon. Every thing was as I had left it, but the prisoner was back been there was gone and I did not who had been there was gone, and I did not blame him for going.

"Of all the men I ever arrested this was one of the most desperate. If I had given him the least chance he would have shot me. On the other hand, had I been in the least excited I should have shot him. But I am not of an excitable nature, and besides never return."

"Well, yes," said I, "I think a good many men would have lost their heads under such circumstances and pulled the

"I suppose some might have done so." said Simmons, as he scratched a match to light his pipe, which had gone out while he was talking. Then he added thoughtfully: "What puzzled me most is that when he ran with such force against my revolver when my finger was pressed against the trigger it didn't go off and shoot him."

WORK YOUR MOLARS.

st Says Teeth Decay Bec Are Not Used Enough.

"Teeth decay from manition superinduced by sedentary desuctude, so to speak," remarked a dentist while drilling into the cavern of a New York Journal reporter's "How can idleness hurt teeth, doctor," sceptically queried the scribe.

"The non-use of the teeth tends to atrophy.

The more one uses his teeth the harder and healthier they become and can more readily resist the corroding influences of time. Teeth that are not used much become very weak and less impervious to decay. If you will notice a patient that has been ill for weeks and living on nilk and soft food when convolescing finds that his teeth hurt him when he cats hard victuals.

"Some men have healthy teeth all their lives because they were given good hard food during infancy. That is the period to begin to save the teeth. Mothers and nurses give children soft food utterly ignorant in many cases of the result. Crusts and hard stuffs should be given to children as soon as they can eat them. In this way the teeth begin to grow healthy and gradually harden with time and use. I confess ually harden with time and use. I confess the thewing-gum girl gives her molars plenty of wholesome and unwholesome ex-ercise. But chewing gum is not especially healthy, because only part of the teeth are used. It is jaw exercise more than any thing else. But in eating hard, wholesome food all the teeth come in contact with the substance.

"Tobacco chewing is not healthy for the teeth because the tobacco is generally placed in one location, like chewing gum, and there remains until thrown out. The Southern negroes have better teeth than most any rase, because they use them from childhood up in masticating hard food."

When Razors Get Tired.

Barbers often assert that razors get tired of shaving, and that they will perform satisfactorily if permitted to rest for a time. It will be found by microscopic examination that the tired razor from long stropping by the same hand and in the same direction has the ultimate fibers of its surface or edge all arranged in one direction, like the edge of a piece of cut velvet; but after a month's rest these fibers rearrange themselves heterogeneously, crossing each other and presenting a saw-like edge (as described abovo), each fiber supporting its fellow, and hence cutting the beard instead of boing forced down flat without cutting, as when laid by. When Razors Get Tired.
